About Sustainable Fabrics

Sustainable fabrics are some of the softest, purest, and most wearable fabrics in the industry today. Free from pesticides and substandard labor conditions, CROW's sustainable fibers give your customers comfort for their body, mind and spirit.

Organic Cotton comes from cotton plants grown without toxic pesticides or fertilizers, and does not put its farmers in destitute poverty to produce it. Organic Cotton is produced under fair trade guidelines, and is biodegradable/compostable.

Bamboo fiber is created from fast growing bamboo plants which grow up to 3 feet a day. No pesticides are necessary. Bamboo is super soft, naturally UV resistant and anti-bacterial. It requires minimal manufacturing chemicals and is biodegradable.

Hemp fabrics are made from the cannabis sativa plant. The variety grown for fiber does not contain THC. Hemp does not need pesticides or fertilizers and grows fast. Hemp is very strong, naturally UV resistant and biodegradable/compostable."

Soy is a favorite fiber at CROW because it can be made from the by-product from other soy products such as the run-off from tofu manufacturing. This process doesn't require any additional farming, uses minimal chemicals in its production, and is biodegradable/compostable.

Lyocell is made from wood pulp from fast-growing trees in managed forests to avoid deforestation. Lyocell is produced with recycled chemicals, in what is called a 'closed loop process.' which keeps the chemicals from polluting our environment. Lyocell is biodegradable/compostable."

A lot of 'sustainable' clothing has more petroleum in it than companies admit. We admit it. Our clothes use polyester zipper casings and thread. Some of our fabrics contain Spandex in very small amounts (1-5 percent) to add stretch and longevity.

Washing Instructions. We recommend washing CROW Clothing in cold water with BioKleen Cold Water formula. Our clothes can be machine or line-dried and still be soft and yummy!
